

G(irls)20 Summit
Annual Report 2011

"The beauty of the G(irls)20 Summit is that young women leaders have their seat at the table, have their voices heard and have the chance to discuss and find, together, solutions for the issues that the world is facing."

Raquel Helen Santos Silva | G(irls)20 Summit 2011 Delegate for Brazil.

Summit Background

In September 2009, The Belinda Stronach Foundation (TBSF) committed up to $5 million over 5 years at The Clinton Global Initiative (CGI) to empower girls and women globally through the G(irls)20 Summit.

The G(irls)20 Summit brings together one delegate from each G-20 country, one representative from the European Union and one representative from the African Union. The delegates debate, discuss and design innovative ideas necessary to economically and politically empower girls and women globally so that they can contribute to the economic, political and social growth of their communities and countries. While the agenda is the same as the G-20 leaders, the participants are all girls, aged 18-20.

The delegates are selected from among hundreds of applicants. They are evaluated and chosen based on their responses to questions that focus on leadership, personal triumph, analytical skills, and their ability to find innovative solutions to the economic challenges facing the world.

The selected delegates participate in panel discussions, attend workshops (media relations, social media and business planning) and caucus to discuss and promote tangible, scalable solutions towards economic prosperity, culminating in a communiqué that provides a blueprint to G-20 leaders on how they can engage and utilize one of the best resources in the world – girls and women.

Much like the G-20 leaders, the G(irls)20 Summit delegates work as a group to develop a plan of action.

G(irls)20 Summit Toronto, Canada 2010

The first G(irls)20 Summit took place at the University of Toronto in June 2010. The themes focused on education, leadership and maternal health. At the conclusion of the Summit, the delegates constructed a communiqué that was delivered in a delegate- led press conference. The communiqué was sent to all G-20 Summit Leaders, Finance Ministers, and Ministers responsible for Gender, Ambassadors and G-20 Sherpas.

Preamble of the G(irls)20 2010 Summit Communiqué

“We, the 21 delegates of the first ever G(irls)20 Summit, know that girls and women have the potential to play a pivotal role in building communities and countries and being catalysts for economic progress around the globe.

We come together in the days before the gathering of the leaders of the world’s most powerful nations at the G-8 and G-20 meetings to be the voice that reminds the leaders of the importance of eliminating barriers for girls and women everywhere and to mobilize change-makers worldwide to add their voices to ours.”

A Mobile Public Library founded by Kartika Nurhayati, G(irls)20 Summit 2010 Delegate (Indonesia)

Recognizing that literacy is a path to a healthier life and increased opportunities, the G(irls)20 Summit delegate from Indonesia created a mobile library that serves young people in the slums of Indonesia. Kartika has worked with local organizations to launch this program.

In their words...

Jane Harris
Australia

Shortly after returning from the 2010 G(irls)20 Summit, I met with Australia's Parliamentary Secretary for International Development Assistance, Bob McMullan, and presented him with a copy of our communiqué. We primarily discussed the focus shared by AusAID and the G(irls)20 Summit delegates on education and women's empowerment in aid programs. More recently, I ran a plenary session at the National Youth Conference on engaging young people in advocacy. Using the skills gained from the Dove Canada workshop at the Summit, I have been able to give several training sessions for Girl Guide Leaders of Youth on mentoring young girls on body image. This program now has the potential to reach up to 25,000 girls and women through Girl Guides Australia. The G(irls)20 Summit gave me the confidence and skills to meaningfully contribute to policy making, especially concerning youth and women on a national and global scale.

Leah Sheppard
Canada

The G(irls)20 Summit demonstrated the importance of having the confidence to act and to make one's voice heard. It inspired me to continue working on various local and global initiatives that facilitate empowerment and action.

For most of the year I taught and ran a dance class for children with physical disabilities, and I have deepened my involvement with the Canada Mathare Education Trust, working to provide scholarships so that students from the Mathare slum in Nairobi, Kenya can attend high school. I am also the Co-Director of an organization that makes civic education more engaging, so that youth have the knowledge and desire to become involved in their local and global communities. All of these activities target both girls and boys as it is only by involving all of society in changing pervasive attitudes and structures that the lives of women and girls can be sustainably improved.

Inès LeBihan
France

Since last year's Summit, I have continued to design new projects and solutions with a strong focus on people. I am currently working with an organization to create new floors to replace the carpets found in classrooms in developing countries. I offered my support and new floors will be implemented this winter.

Alberta Pelino
Italy

The G(irls)20 Summit was the turning point in my life. It has shaped the person that I am and everything that I am currently working towards. The Summit taught me that you can do everything you want in your life and achieve your dreams if you work hard.

In 2011, I founded the Young Ambassadors Society with the aim to improve collaboration and international dialogue between youth. Currently, I am planning to develop concrete empowerment projects for girls and women. The G(irls)20 Summit gave me the knowledge, the tools and the confidence necessary to be a young change-maker in my community!

Aiki Segawa
Japan

Without a doubt the G(irls)20 Summit has triggered a positive change within me. It has helped me realize that in order to truly empower others, it's important take time to self-reflect. Today, I am a stronger woman than last year. A positive change in the lives of girls and women can impact the entire world as their persistent efforts generate waves of humanistic reforms. I am determined to be an active change-maker - creating a better world for girls and women around the globe by empowering each individual to believe in their innate and boundless potential.

I sincerely appreciate everyone that enabled me to participate in the Summit and wish the successive generations of delegates well.

July Lee
USA

The G(irls)20 Summit was a life empowering experience that gave me the tools to begin projects that address women and youth empowerment from a global perspective. I have now concluded the first year of Project Heart for Change: South Africa, a sponsorship program with the goal of assisting South African teens in developing resources to complete their compulsory education. An upcoming project called Write a Smile will be launched shortly with the aim of helping abused and orphaned children in Mexicali, Mexico create valuable resources to help improve their development. The project will also pair these children with a pen pal from the United States. The experience and knowledge gained at the G(irls)20 Summit inspired many of the projects I am currently working on.

G(irls)20 Summit Paris, France 2011

The second G(irls)20 Summit took place from October 16-21st, 2011 at the Académie Diplomatique Internationale (ADI) in Paris, France. Upon arrival, the delegates participated in a Public Relations and Media Training workshop presented by Edelman France. To ensure that all the delegates were well versed in how to use digital tools, Google France led a workshop called Navigating the Digital World. And to inspire the delegates, Standard Chartered Bank and Women Win's introduced the delegates to their internationally successful program, Goal.

The Summit officially opened on October 18th with greetings from Madame Bachelet, Executive Director of UN Women and The Honourable Belinda Stronach, President & CEO, Stronach Group.

To kick start the main focus of the Summit – the economic prowess of girls and women - Dr. Sudhir Shetty of the World Bank Provided highlights of the 2012 World Bank Report on Gender and Development. He then joined the first panel, Girls and Women as Engines of Growth. This panel was moderated by Jane Allen of Deloitte, and featured Isabelle Flory of Intel France and Dr. Thelma Paris from the International Rice Research Institute in Singapore.

Nike Foundation Debate

Using their internationally recognized work around the importance of investing in girls and The Girl Effect, The Nike Foundation organized a debate about what it means to be a girl and brought two debaters from Rwanda to debate two of the G(irls)20 Summit delegates – Miriam from Saudi Arabia and Natasha from Indonesia.

How Girls Can Use Their Voice For Political Change

The afternoon was focused on How Girls Can Use Their Voice For Political Change and featured Nalah Ayed of CBC, Marisa Mazria Katz a freelance journalist who has works to raise the voices of girls and women in Morocco, Elise Jordan, an international journalist and blogger from the USA and Katarina Wallin Bureau from Burson Marsteller and who specializes in the Middle East.

If I Knew Then What I Know Now

If I Knew Then What I Know Now, a panel moderated by Ava Yaskiel of Norton Rose and featured Belinda Stronach, Tish Clyde from GE Healthcare and H elo ise Husson of Chartis France to share their own experiences with the 21 delegates.

The Commoditization of Girls and Women

Day two of the Summit opened with a business planning workshop given by Joel Silver of Trilogy. This was followed by panel led by Beverley Hammond, Veritas Communications Inc. The panel focused on The Commoditization of Girls and Women with a spotlight on human trafficking and child marriage. Expert panelists included Mabel Van Oranje from The Elders, Tony Schiena from IC30, and Jasvinder Saghera, a survivor of child marriage and the founder of Karma Nirvana.

Using Your Platform to Empower Girls and Women

The final panel of the Summit was moderated by Amanda Alvaro of Narrative Advocacy Media and featured International Supermodel & Activist, Alek Wek, Canadian Entertainer, Jann Arden, Human Rights Advocate, David Keyes and G(irls)20 Summit Delegate 2010 (India), Tanvi Girotra. The panel showcased how each individual – woman or man – can use their platform to improve the lives of girls and women. Look for a Grand Prix for Women in Saudi Arabia in the coming future!

That evening, delegates, speakers, panelists, volunteers and sponsors came together for a reception featuring French fare in the ballroom of the Académie Diplomatique Internationale (ADI).

G(irls)20 2011 Summit Press Conference

On day three of the Summit, delegates led by Jennifer Hollett, the official G(irls)20 Summit moderator, and supported by Beverley Hammond and Kathy Barnett of Veritas Communications Inc. developed the official Summit communiqué. The communiqué was presented the in a closing press conference to Consuelo Rimmert, G-20 Aide to President Sarkozy.

G(irls)20 2011 Summit Highlights

Canadian entertainer, Jann Arden and international supermodel and activist for Sudan, Alek Wek joined the delegates in France.

The delegates for the 2011 Summit included:

Lilian Kathiri M'nkubitu (African Union)
Carolina Lopez Capo (Argentina)
Claire Poyser (Australia)
Raquel Helen Santos Silva (Brazil)
Hanan Dhanani (Canada)
Chloe Yin-Yin Lo (China)
Mariana Carvalho (European Union)

G(irls)20 2011 Summit Results

“We can’t build strong economies without the active participation of girls and women. Yet every year child marriage stops 10 million girls from realizing their potential. The G(irls)20 Summit highlights the barriers that prevent girls and women from playing their part in the development of their communities and countries.”

Mabel van Oranje | 2011 CEO, The Elders

In the coming months the delegates will continue to work together using the tools they developed from the workshops. The goal is to present their work with tangible results at the next G(irls)20 Summit in Mexico. The delegates will have the opportunity to present their initiatives on Google Moderator.
